In this essay, I will explain why Rosa Sparks was an important figure. Introductory sentences should be more enticing, like this:

A museum in Michigan recently paid 492,000 for an old dilapidated bus from Montgomery, Alabama.

The second sentence makes you wonder: why does the old bus cost so much? And readers will continue to get to know the work to find the answer.

The first paragraph should be coherent. The following sentence in the introduction clarifies the first and prepares the essay for presentation of the main topic. For instance:

As it became known, it was the old yellow bus that prompted people to fight for civil rights when a young woman named Rosa Sparks. In the next sentence, we must proceed to a clear statement of our opinion. For instance:

Refusing to give way to a white man, Rosa Sparks inspired people. After this event, a movement of freedom fighters appeared, which exists today.

Thesis

The main part of an essay should contain an average of three paragraphs. Each of them contains an idea that confirms the main argument. You should be very clear about your point of view and then provide justifications, facts and examples.

If the main idea looks like this:

It took incredible courage for an African American girl to commit such a daring act in Alabama in 1955.

That can be confirmed and developed as follows:

This incident occurred in an era in which African Americans could be arrested and severely punished for committing minor acts of disobedience.

You can use other ideas to support the mainstream of thought. After you can bring statistics or graphs. You should also remember the use of connecting structures between paragraphs and sentences.

For example: besides, in reality, in general, in addition, as a result, for this reason, etc. However, they should not be abused!
